

HAVE YOUR SAY ON THE DELROY PARKLANDS RECREATIONAL PRECINCT MASTER PLAN

Dubbo residents have another opportunity to have their say in the future look of the city with the Delroy Parklands Recreational Precinct Master Plan currently on display.

Dubbo Regional Council has developed the master plan with a view to identify supporting infrastructure, carparks, amenities, ovals and play spaces needed in the Delroy Parklands area.

The master plan has a strategic approach to population growth within the area and is proposed to cost $3.2 million across three stages.

“In 2021 the draft Jaira Oval Play Space was exhibited consulting specifically on the playground, which has been included in stage one of the master plan, along with the carpark, amenities and footbridge,” Manager Recreation and Open Spaces Ian McAlister said.

“When looking at the submissions for the Jaira Oval Play Space it was determined by Council that a master plan needed to be created for the whole area, rather than singling out the play space.

“This master plan now focuses on adding in other elements that will cater to the continual growth in population for the Delroy Precinct,” Mr McAlister said.

Once approved and finalised the master plan is proposed to be developed in three stages, with stage two including playing fields and an additional carpark and stage three including a multi-court, skate park and outdoor gym.

The development of the area will support plans for a new residential estate which is currently being built by the Catholic Diocese of Bathurst in the adjacent area.

The addition of public open space in this high growth area of Dubbo will provide recreational opportunities that will provide long term benefits to the residents of the area.

The public consultation will close at 9am on Monday 23 October.
