15 Nov 2019 TEST DRILLING UNDERWAY IN WELLINGTON FOR ADDITIONAL WATER

After an extensive procurement process, a successful supplier has been engaged to undertake drilling and exploration services to locate new water sources for Wellington in response to the worsening drought situation currently gripping the region and NSW. Wellington currently draws all of its water from the river. A ground water licence exists for Wellington but the town does not have a usable bore for potable (drinking) water. The test drilling currently underway is critical in the hunt for an adequate bore water supply as close as possible to the water treatment plant.
